Interfaith Community Clinic receives $100,000 from St. Luke's Episcopal Health Charities

The Woodlands, TX (May 19, 2011) – On Wednesday, May 18, 2011, The South County Community Clinic dba Interfaith Community Clinic was awarded a $100,000 matching grant from St. Luke's Episcopal Health Charities.

Established in 1996 by Dr. Joel Kerschenbaum, Interfaith Community Clinic, located in Oak Ridge North in South Montgomery County, is a nonprofit healthcare center that provides quality medical and dental care, counseling and social services to those who have no insurance and who do not meet criteria to receive care in another setting, such as governmental or county assistance programs. Funded by donations, the Clinic is staffed by licensed physicians, nurses, dentists, dental assistants, dental hygienists, social workers, translators and support people who volunteer their time and services to run the Clinic. For more information about the Community Clinic view www.interfaithcommunityclinic.org.

“We are delighted to support Interfaith Community Clinic in its efforts to increase opportunities for health enhancement and disease prevention, especially among the medically underserved. We are particularly impressed with their collaborative efforts and utilization of matching dollars from Memorial-Hermann,” said St. Luke's Episcopal Health Charities Executive Director Patricia Gail Bray, PhD.

Ann Snyder, President of Interfaith of The Woodlands and Interfaith Community Clinic, added, “We are extremely grateful for the continued support of St. Luke's Episcopal Health Charities and could not do what we do without them. We look forward to providing healthcare to the underserved in our community.”
